

On-Site Reliability

- While energy efficiency is important today, reliability is still the most important goal in operating a mission critical facility.
- A highly reliable infrastructure design eliminates points of failure and employs total redundancy where necessary. The construction and commissioning of a facility begins the process of continued observation and maintenance to ensure reliability.
- The On-Site Reliability Program from CPT pairs the world's premium high density VRLA batteries with our certified network of service and maintenance professionals.